Stay Active and Food Safe This Summer

July puts a mark on summertime fun with many families planning bar-b-ques at the park, beach day picnics, day hikes, and camping vacations. These types of events and activities over the summer create long-lasting memories with family and friends. This time of year also brings out many of our favorite seasonal foods that we all enjoy! Whether it's some of our favorite meals shared around the bar-b-que, or sandwiches and salads we bring on a picnic, or even snacks we take on a local trail hike, these foods are an important part of the adventure. However, with the warm temperatures and long hours we spend outside comes the increase in potential for foodborne illness. Let's look at some ways you can ensure you and your family enjoy being outdoors this summer all while keeping the foods we prepare and consume safe to eat so nothing spoils the fun.

Outdoor Adventures

Hiking is a great way to enjoy the outdoors and stay active. Going on a hike? Grab some snacks on your way out. Whole fresh fruits and vegetables are healthy options that will keep you hydrated and give you a boost of energy to finish out your hike. Make sure to rinse these well, cut, and place them in safe food storage bags. Other items such as pre-packaged nuts, trail mix, peanut butter, and canned foods are best for additional snacks on longer outdoor adventures. Uneaten canned foods should be disposed of and should not be saved for later consumption. Water is a must! Prevent feeling lightheaded or dizzy due to dehydration and drink more water! Always wash your hands with clean water after any activity and before touching anything you are planning to eat.

Picnics and B-B-Q's

Whether at the park or the beach, picnics and bar-b-ques offer great opportunities for fun under the sun. When scheduling these activities, it is imperative to plan, prepare, and safely store food for consumption. Keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold! When food is left out in hot summer temperatures, bacteria can quickly begin to multiply. If these foods reach a temperature between 40 °F and 140 °F, it is known as the "Danger Zone" where bacteria in the foods can reach harmful levels after just 2 hours. Make sure to bring a cooler with you and enough ice to keep foods cool and safe to eat throughout the day.

Campground Tips

Camping is a popular summer vacation activity. The idea of being away from home for a couple days can allow us to explore new roads, beautiful views, and tasty grilled food flavors! Transport raw meats and poultry product in separate leak-proof plastic bags and keep them in an iced cooler. It is best if you designate one cooler only for perishable foods and take a second cooler to store drinks and snacks. Make sure to wash your hands before and after handling food as well and keep all surface areas clean with alcohol-based wipes. Take plenty of food platters, plates, and utensils to prevent cross-contamination of foods. Use a food thermometer to ensure your food is cooked thoroughly and it is safe to eat. Consider taking non-perishable, shelf-stable foods for longer outdoor vacations.

With these important tips in mind, now it's time to go out and have some fun this summer! Create new memories, safely savor healthy and delicious foods and snacks, enjoy staying active with family and friends in the long sunny days, and cherish the lively summer nights!

Manténgase activo y con alimentos seguros este verano

Julio pone su punto culminante en la diversión del verano, ya que muchas familias planean barbacoas en el parque, picnics en la playa, caminatas de un día y vacaciones en campamentos. Este tipo de eventos y actividades durante el verano crean recuerdos duraderos con familiares y amigos. ¡Esta época del año también saca a relucir muchas de nuestras comidas de temporada que todos disfrutamos! Ya sean algunas de nuestras comidas favoritas compartidas alrededor de la barbacoa, sándwiches y ensaladas que llevamos a un picnic o incluso refrigerios que llevamos en una caminata por un sendero local, estos alimentos son una parte importante de la aventura. Sin embargo, con las temperaturas cálidas y las largas horas que pasamos al aire libre, aumenta el potencial de enfermedades transmitidas por los alimentos. Veamos algunas formas en que puede asegurarse de que usted y su familia disfruten del aire libre este verano y, al mismo tiempo, mantengan seguros los alimentos que preparamos y consumimos para que nada arruine la diversión.

Aventuras al aire libre

El senderismo es una excelente manera de disfrutar del aire libre y mantenerse activo. ¿Vas a hacer una caminata? Toma algunos bocadillos al salir. Las frutas y verduras frescas enteras son opciones saludables que te mantendrán hidratado y te darán un impulso de energía para terminar tu caminata. Asegúrate de enjuagártelos bien, cortarlos y colocarlos en bolsas seguras para almacenar alimentos. Otros artículos, como nueces empaquetadas, mezclas de frutos secos, mantequilla de maní y alimentos enlatados, son mejores como refrigerios adicionales en aventuras más largas al aire libre. Los alimentos enlatados no consumidos deben desecharse y no deben guardarse para tu consumo posterior. ¡El agua es imprescindible! ¡Evita sentir mareos o aturdimiento debido a la deshidratación y bebe más agua! Lávese siempre las manos con agua limpia después de cualquier actividad y antes de tocar cualquier cosa que planee comer.

Picnics y barbacoas

Ya sea en el parque o en la playa, los picnics y las barbacoas ofrecen grandes oportunidades para divertirse bajo el sol. Al programar estas actividades, es imperativo planificar, preparar y almacenar de forma segura los alimentos para el consumo. ¡Mantenga los alimentos calientes calientes y los fríos fríos! Cuando los alimentos se dejan afuera en las altas temperaturas del verano, las bacterias pueden comenzar a multiplicarse rápidamente. Si estos alimentos alcanzan una temperatura entre 40 °F y 140 °F, se conoce como la "zona de peligro", donde las bacterias en los alimentos pueden alcanzar niveles dañinos después de solo 2 horas. Asegúrese de llevar una hielera y suficiente hielo para mantener los alimentos frescos y seguros para comer durante todo el día.

Consejos para acampar

Acampar es una actividad popular durante las vacaciones de verano. ¡La idea de estar fuera de casa por un par de días puede permitirnos explorar nuevos caminos, hermosas vistas y sabrosos sabores de comida a la parrilla! Transporte las carnes crudas y productos avícolas en bolsas de plástico separadas a prueba de goteos y manténgalas en una hielera fría. Lo mejor es designar una hielera solo para alimentos perecederos y llevar una segunda hielera para guardar bebidas y aperitivos. Asegúrese de lavarse las manos antes y después de manipular alimentos y mantenga limpias todas las superficies con toallitas a base de alcohol. Lleve suficientes charolas, platos y utensilios de comida para evitar la contaminación cruzada de los alimentos. Utilice un termómetro para alimentos para asegurarse de que los alimentos estén bien cocidos y sean seguros para comer. Considere llevar alimentos no perecederos y de larga conservación para unas vacaciones más largas al aire libre.

Con estos importantes consejos en mente, ¡ahora es el momento de salir y divertirse este verano! Cree nuevos recuerdos, saboree con seguridad alimentos y aperitivos deliciosos y saludables, disfrute manteniéndose activo con familiares y amigos en los largos días soleados y disfrute de las animadas noches de verano.
